

Fatah Al-Sham's Logistic Convoy Blown Up in Idlib

South Front

Russian and Syrian fighter jets destroyed a logistic convoy prepared by Fatah al-Sham in Idlib province.

Russian and Syrian fighter jets destroyed a logistic convoy prepared by Fatah al-Sham (the newly formed al-Qaeda-affiliated terrorist group previously known as al-Nusra Front) in Idlib province.

A convoy of military equipment and weapons heading to Southern Aleppo in Idlib was bombed by Russian and Syrian warplanes, field sources said on August 2.

According to the sources, the terrorists' equipment and weapons were also smashed, and dozens of terrorists were killed during the airstrikes in Sarmin, Jabal al-Arbaeen, Saraqib, Kafar Takhrim, Ram al-Hamdan and the industrial zone in Idlib.

In addition, on August 1, the terrorists' aid convoys that were moving from Idlib to Aleppo were targeted and destroyed by Syrian fighter jets.

According to the battlefield sources, the Idlib-Aleppo supply lines of Fatah al-Sham in Idlib were heavily struck by Syrian warplanes on August 1. As result, terrorists' vehicles and cargos were destroyed.

The Syrian army destroyed at least 12 terrorists' pick-up vans during the attacks near the town of al-Dana.